2014

After graduating with an economics degree from Claremont McKenna College, Hunter Olsen spent two years working in Denver at DaVita Kidney Care, a Fortune 500 health care company, doing strategy work advising the development of 250+ new clinics across the US. “I then had a serendipitous call with a JD/MBA graduate fresh out of Penn Law and Wharton who convinced me to help him build out a virtual forum for about 200 health care CEOs and key industry thought leaders to help them navigate the pandemic and build industry collaboratives together.”

“Life is always full of interesting twists and turns. After a few years I found myself back in Spokane looking to start my next chapter. I had a wonderful conversation with Jamie Tender, which led me to take a Development Associate role with Saint George’s to help further the school’s advancement efforts. Today my work largely focuses on identifying new opportunities for SGS to pursue additional grant funding as well as analysis of development data to help boost the Annual Fund and grow the endowment.

“In my spare time, I plan to begin working on my MBA at the University of Southern California remotely and continue enjoying my passions for skiing, reading, and traveling whenever possible.”
